Friend -

Last week you joined a movement of global citizens working to end extreme poverty by 2030.

Want to get started having an impact? It's easy:

Click the button below to learn how you can help finally wipe-out polio, a devastating disease that's prevented millions of people from pulling themselves out of poverty.

Recently, vaccines have dominated the news in many countries, but you may not have heard the whole story.

Last week, because of the work of global citizens like you, 300 million children will have the opportunity to get vaccinated and 5-6 million children's lives will be saved.

Over the past year global citizens tweeted at politicians, wrote postcards, and got thousands of their friends to sign petitions asking for new funding for world vaccination efforts.

The momentum built for months and guess what? World leaders listened.

You can start playing a part in the movement right now by clicking the button below and standing up for a world without polio.

I'm so excited to see what 2015 has in store for us.
